To Whom That May Have An Interest:

When two flat landers decided to build a dream home in the mountains, it was quickly recognized we would need professional help. In interviews with prospective contractors locating a group that provided a start to finish expertise was of the utmost importance.

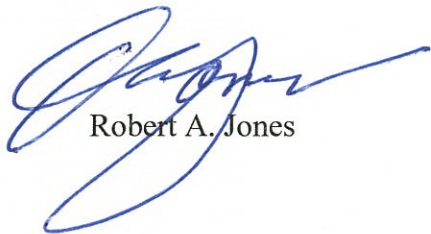

We found the principles of Riverstone Development Group offering such aid. The home site built into the side of a mountain had its own challenges; along with the selection of best suited building materials. As the house progressed their insight and connections with cabinets designers, appliances, electrical and plumbing fixtures, floor coverings and audio/visual equipment, at competitive pricing was invaluable.

The in house designer directed us in the right direction when selecting these all important designs and fixtures. Our assigned builders foreman worked with us throughout the process with constant communication updating the construction, identifying issues and suggesting solutions even though we lived 10 hours away.

We would recommend anyone looking to build their dream home to interview with Riverstone Development Group, a professional company with knowledgeable, dedicated management.
